Cabinet hears survey on Arab citizens

Jerusalem Post Reporter The Prime Minister's Arab affairs adviser, Mr. Shmuel Toledano, yesterday gave the Cabinet a survey the situation of the country's Arab citizens. This was the result of a request to Premier Golda Meir some weeks ago by Tourism Min-ister Moshe Kol to put the issue on the agenda. The Cabinet is due to have a follow-up, at a session in a few weeks' time, to debate Mr. Tole-

One of the persons present at the survey said Mr. Toledano spoke with complete candour about the stillunsolved problems of Israel's Arab community, but also recorded what had been achieved in recent years. "He gave some remarkably impressive facts," one Cabinet minister told The Post.

Mr. Toledano touched on education, economic and social development, health, job opportunities, cultural activities, and integration into national life. He gave details about the economic prospects open to Arab college graduates — a sphere which interested Mr. Kol when he first raised the issue in the Cabinet.

Allon queries Israel team on Dachau absence

Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Allon cabled the Israeli party at the Munich Olympics yesterday to ask them to explain their poor attendance at Friday's memorial service on the site of the Dachau concentration camp.

The ceremony, which brought hundreds of athletes to the site outside Munich, was attended by only two Israeli athletes fencers Dan Allon and Yehuda Weinstein — accompanied by their trainer, Andre Spitzer. The only team officials present were Yariv Oren and Haim Wein. The other athletes and officials were reported earlier to have said they were busy with meetings and training at the time of the ceremony.

Anti-Semitism said rising in Italy

NEW YORK (INA). - The 'New York Times" reports from Rome that Italian Jews are disturbed by a spate of anti-Semitism and regard neo-Fascist sentiment as a major cause of it. Since 1967, numerous anti-Semitic incidents, unprecedented since World War II, have occurred, the "Times" says. Anti-Jewish slogans and swastikas have appeared on Jewish community buildings, and several Jewish cemeteries and synagogues have been desecrated.

Vicious anonymous letters such as "prepare your bags today, tomorrow may be too late," and numerous anti-Jewish publications have also called attention to what Sergio Piperno Beer, president of the Union of Jewish communities. has called a "reawakening" of anti-Semitism here.

Just how disturbed Italy's 35,000 Jews - about 15,000 of whom live in Rome - are by recent events is unclear, the "Times" says. As a group that was confined to ghettoes for more than three centuries before 1870, they are fatalistic where reports said. Italy, and especially the Vatican,

Belfast man murdered by 'butchers'

BELFAST (AP). - The "Butchers of Belfast" struck again early yesterday to kill a young Protestant in a bloody "eye for an eye" vendetta between rival assassination squads.

The man, Thomas Boyd, found dead on a sofa in his home in the Carlisle Circus district by wife. He was the 19th person to die in Northern Ireland in the last week and the fifth victim of the shadowy killer squads in four days.

Police said the latest victim of the gunmen was shot through the head - the trademark of the assassins, both Protestant and Ro man Catholic.

The killing followed the murder of two Catholics near the Old Park district on Saturday and police believed this was a revenge slaying by Catholic extremists.

CELLOPHANE SOUNDS LIKE SIZZLING SAUSAGES

By IAN BROWN

SOUND effects on radio, television and in films have come a ong way since the days when a studio assistant clapped two pieces of coconut together to simulate the latter of horses' hooves. With tolay's highly sensitive broadcast-ng and receiving equipment, enuine sounds can nearly always be eproduced. But there are times then, because the results are so good, some of the tricks from the "steam radio" days are still

Take the sound of sausages siziling in a frying pan. Real sausages rying in front of a microphone ound more like a battle scene with the hot fat sounding like canion shells. So it is more realistic o crumple cellophane a few feet way from the microphone. Similary, crunching an empty match box s used for the sound of a house in fire because the real thing isn't iramatic enough. Matching sound with sight is not too difficult in a tudio where microphones can be placed carefully, but it becomes omplicated in tocation work and ounds are usually recorded later in

It's the same with a car crash. To match the sound exactly with the film, the noises are made in a studio with assistants banging old baths and smashing sheets of glass.

Creaking doors also give rise to improvisations. Instead of using a real door, many directors prefer the old method of using a piece of wood which slots into another piece of wood to provide a large range of squeaks and creaks.

CRUSHED SKULL

Some of the most cunning sound effects these days are to be heard horror films. How, for instance, do they manage to convey the sound of a man's skull being crushed? Hasy. The effects man twists a knife into a potato and at the same time slices through a cabbage. For the sound of bones cracking, it has been found that chopping through a stick of celery is the most effective.

These effects are also used on ng with the action on the screen, will go. Last year, an actress was cording of the show.

A BBC sound expert told me: While it is now easier to provide the exact sound wanted, we have to be increasingly careful about accuracy. The performers' sense of rhythm and timing is superb. The plethora of dynamic and expressive nuances seems inexhaustible. The presenta-tion is always moderate, but nevertheless warmly involved. Even more "contemporary" tunes receive treatment making them sound as

As it is, his presentation provides an un-paralleled emotional and musical experience for all listeners. Even the community singing which ended the evening in lieu of an encore sound-

This would not appeal to the average gourmet. But it is strange that some of us are quite prepared to eat "insects" that live in the sea lobsters, crabs and shrimps, for ample. taboo is honey, which again some might consider strange. The worker bees carry nectar back to the bive and pass it to hive bees who use their saliva to form the product that is placed in the honeycomb. Perhaps we should just eat flowers, as England's King Henry VIII is supposed to have done. He ap-parently enjoyed violets chopped with onions and lettuce, and sugared primroses.

Eventually, all these fads and fancies will become purely academic as scientists all over the world work on ways and means for our bodies to obtain all necessary nutrients from materials such as wool and petrol. New Zealand scientists have discovered that rats thrive on the edible protein in wool. As Dr. Francis Shorland says: "A good bit of wool is packed with more protein than many a hunk of meat. It can be produced in cake-like form after it has been processed to remove grease and made soluble to eliminate the fibres. This could easily sustain human life."

PROTEIN

Investigations in the petroleum industry have led to the production of a protein which tastes like mildflavoured meat. Hide, feathers, straw and hair also have protein potential, and some British experts forecast that within the next 50 years a high proportion of the goods in food stores will be low-priced synthetics. The genuine article will still be available for the old-fashioned food lover, but at fancy prices. Seah Chiang-Nee, of the Asian News Services, writes from Bangkok: It has long been suspected that Thai farmers, like their counterparts in Asia, will eat anything that crawls, swims, flies, hops or

Dockers protest changes

By YA'ACOV FRIEDLER Jerusalem Post Reporter

IAIFA. - The port here was para sed for two hours yesterday as the ,500 workers held a meeting to pro-ist against changes in the work ystem of their 120 foremen. The langes, which were introduced yeserday morning, are aimed at setting p an incentive pay system for the remen.

The men made no attempt to rest the introduction of the change, hich they fear will open the way for eterioration in their work condi-ons. When the first attempt to take the change was made last pril, the workers resisted and reed the foremen to back down. At yesterday's meeting, which as quiet and orderly, the men emwered their committees to "fight · the end" against the change. The solution was adopted by acclaim ithout any dissent.

NO CHANGE

The leaders charged that the ange had been introduced without nsulting the workers and drew multous applause when one of em cried, "There'll be no change Haifa Port without our consent. tey warned that "eventually the anges will hit us, even if not right w." manpower but not enough jobs. So we shall try to expand the economic base there by bringing in new industry. Eventually, Carmiel folks who now travel to work in Haifa will be able to find employment locally. On the other hand, in Mitzpe Ramon the problem is people, not jobs. So here we will try to double the population within four or five years.'

According to Mr. Bar-Lev, the access of the plan will depend a great deal on the settlement of new immigrants in the development towns. The Director-General of the Commerce and Industry Ministry, Mr. Gideon Lahav, told The Jerusalem Post that the special committee is working on the premise that between 40 and 50 per cent of the new immigrants will agree to settle in the development areas.

CHINA'S FIRST VETO

China has cast its first veto in the Security Council, blocking Bangladesh's application to become a member of the U.N. The negative vote did not come as a surprise, and it may probehaviour in the Security Coun-

Bangladesh was sponsored in the Security Council by four nations against whom China bears individual grudges. The Soviet Union, its major political and ideological antagonist: Yugoslavia, the Titoist-revisionist country; India, against whom China fought a war ten years ago, and Britain, still holding a colony off China's coast: Hongkong.

It would have been too much to expect that China should approve Bangladesh's application at a time when the Indo-Pakistani talks at Simla, on the implementation of the recent agreement between Mrs. Gandhi and Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, have run into difficulties. China would not deal a blow to its friend Pakistan by voting for Bangladesh. It could hardly afford to provide India with a major diplomatic victory at this time.

The Chinese veto will not lose China much American goodwill and Sino-American relations have not yet developed to a point at which they could be hurt, and the United States is still in any case cool towards Bangladesh. China would have

THE People's Republic of refused to admit Bangladesh to the U.N. even if it had meant bucking all the countries of the Third World and voting against the idea of universal representation in the world organization, an idea for which China vide a clue to China's future fought energetically during the many years of her own exclusion from the U.N.

> There are also internal reasons for the China veto. It seems that there are still a number of Chinese leaders who are not very happy over the "international" and moderate policy pursued by Premier Chou En-lai. He had to demonstrate that China still relained her freedom of action and was practising an independent foreign policy. If it meant voting against India's protégé, then this was an appropriate cause.

China's behaviour in the Security Council will be watched closely by Israel. It is likely that China will not hesitate to use the veto to block any mild resolution on the Middle East, and might attempt to organize a strong anti-Israel resolution if the Council is called upon to discuss the Middle East again, or prevent the kind of consensus which led to the passage of the 242 resolution five years ago. The China veto does not augur well for Israel, even if we have long ago despaired of getting a fair hearing in that body, and even if it has long since ceased to be an effective organization.

RUSSIAN JEWS DO PAY FOR THEIR EDUCATION

WE ARE SENDING

By DAVID KRIVINE Jerusalem Post Reporter

THE ransom levied in Russia on departing professionals is not just a breach of human rights, it is also a piece of financial sleight-of-hand.

The economic argument advanced to justify this exaction is that university graduates should reimburse the state for its outlay on their education. But who made the outlay?

The Russian population produces a great deal more than it consumes. The difference goes to finance the Government in all its activities, educational and other. The share of the national cake appropriated by the Kremlin is larger than in any of the Western capitalist powers, because the Soviet authorities are not afraid to depress living standards. They spend a much higher proportion of the national income than does the U.S. on armaments, space flights, for-eign agitation, the gigantic ap-paratus of public administra-tion, and sophisticated industrial products having a strategic or prestige value like supersonic planes.

The result is that the average Russian earns only 100 roubles a month, though he produces perhaps twice that sum. He owes the state nothing for the services he receives, since he paid for them in the first place by producing more than he consumes.

TAXES The revenue authorities in Israel never tire of explaining to the public that they should not resent unpocketing taxes, because they are buying some-thing with that money. Taxes are a purchase price for the social and other services they enjoy. The Jews in Russia pay their taxes too, because they are allowed to receive for their personal use only a fraction of what their product is worth. At any particular mo-ment there is no debt situation between the population and the state for the populamake a noisy protest outside the Moscow Norodny Bank in the City of London at the week-end. They were protesting about the new tax now levied against Jews when they leave the Soviet Union as emigrants.

tion is the state. In budget terms, the State is nothing more than a bookkeeping agency. It makes sure that revenue covers expenditure. The population of Russia consumes the expenditure, but also supplies the revenue, so it owes the state nothing. Nor does any cross-section of the population (whether a town or region or ethnic group) owe money to the authorities, because each sector pays its way like everybody else.

SCHOOLING It may be argued that Jews get more schooling in Russia than the non-Jews. Whether

If a university graduate con-sumes more education, he pro-duces more as a result of that investment. In economic terms, the costs financed by the state and the benefits accruing to the state cancel each other out. The alternative is to imply that the salaried teacher, doctor and engineer are parasites, who prey on the working men and owe them money.

USSR

What about the university graduate who has just terminated his studies and not yet started making his contribu-tion as a producer? He could be classified as a debtor to society. But he is counter-balanced by veteran university graduates who have completed an entire career in their profession. They are society's credi-

When making accounts at the individual level, we can assume that the man who is half-way through his workinglife is in balance with society. That means the average man is in balance. The over-consumption of the younger people is offset by the under-consumption of the older ones. As the Jewish emigrants constitute, with respect to their ages, a normal cross-section of society, they owe nothing to the Soviets.

DEBT

If there is any debt, it is rather the other way round. Each equal citizen in the egalitarian Bolshevik republic owns his portion of all the assets the country possesses. Leaving aside the state's public domain (ranging from tanks and battleships to hospitals, palaces and hotels), each Russian Jew owns at least the apartment space he occupies. This right is represented in the liberal West by the price he sells it for. An emigrant from the U.S. is free to liquidate his presented that the control of date his personal share of the country's assets and take the money with him. In Russia the value of his assets is confiscated. The emigrating Jew donates his dwelling and other belongings to the state, for nothing.

Here is another example. All Russian earners paid a forced loan equal to one month's income per annum every year for 10 years. That money will not be refunded to emigrant Jews, professional or other. They made the extra sacrifice in living standards to gain a future benefit, like everybody else; but they have forfeited the future benefit.

The ransom imposed by the Kremlin is thus nothing more than a cash fine. It represents no Jewish debt or obligation, as long as arithmetic has any meaning. It is simply an exaction, either to prevent edu-cated Jews from leaving Rus-sia, or to blackmail Jews in the capitalist countries into subsidizing the Communist

HELPFUL ARABS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Por Sir. — On Friday, August 11 m wife and I were lost in the Judan 11 C Desert most of the day and nigh without water or food. Early Satur day morning, we finally got of onto the Elin Fashkha-Elin Gen road near the 63 km. post. When we arrived at the road, we were naturally totally exhausted unable to walk and dying of thirst Several cars passed us, but even though I furiously tried to wave them down, calling out in Helical that we had no water, no me stopped. Two army jeeps filled with soldiers passed us, a United Na-tions truck passed us, four large licensed cars passed, as well as on with a tax exemption license bords After quite a while the first or with West Bank plates passed and stopped immediately, gave us water and food, and took us to civilization Thanks to the Arabs and their traditional hospitality, we survived.

MOSCOW, (Ofns). -Sensitive Russians are already busy drawing up the balance sheet of the latest innovation in illiberalism-the tax on academic emigrants. And there is very little they find on the positive side of the ledger.

Their most acute fear is about the desolation it will bring into Soviet cultural life. Many of the most distinguished and valuable experts in these fields are provided by the Jewish community, and cap left if they pay the fees and leave will be enormous.

With their departure and the alienation of the Jewish community the Soviet cultural-scientific scene will become even more provincial and cut off from the mainstream of world culture.
